The Very Best of all Self Instructors are

WINNER'S EUREKA METHODS.

Up to date and plainly written, these methods have given universal satisfaction, and we recommend them to any desiring a cheap and, at the same time, good method for any of the instruments named. These methods are beautifully printed on extra fine paper, and will be mailed to any address, postage paid, on rece pt of

SIXTY CENTS FOR ANY ONE OR $2.00 FOR ANY FOUR OF THE BOOKS.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE ACCORDION.

For the accordion, this book is about the very best that has ever been compiled for that instrument. Every tune is marked with figures indicating the keys to be used. The scales in all the principal keys with flats and sharps are fully explained, so that the learner may be enabled to arrange other music for his own use, without the tedious task of transposing the same. Examples are given in all keys of just how to do it, so plainly demonstrated that it may be understood by a child. Most of the popular tunes of the day are found among its contents. Full instructions in all particulars will be found in its pages, the rudiments of music are fully explained, so that the learner who wishes to play correctly will find it full and comprehensive.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE BANJO.

For the banjo, this book is really the plainest and most desirable of all Instructors ever offered to learners. Everything pertaining to the instrument is fully explained. The scales and chords in every key are illustrated by a plan of the fingerboard designating the correct position of the fingers, in all available positions. It contains the latest and most popular songs and dances of the day arranged in an easy and playable manner, avoiding all difficult and heavy chords that are unnecessary in simple melodies for the pupil. It is a Self-Instructor in the fullest sense, and to those who cannot easily obtain a teacher, it is all that is needed, giving all particulars in a concise and careful manner.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE CLARINET.

For a full and complete instructor for the clarinet, this work has no equal. The scales are fully illustrated by carefully prepared diagrams showing every note upon the instrument, complete with studies and melodic exercises for daily practice. Articulation, embellishment, the shake, etc., are carefully explained. Matters relating to the various clarinets in A, Bb and C, are discussed in su h a manner as to enable the learner to play with other instruments. There is nothi g omitted that is neccssary to give the learner a comprehensive idea of all matters relating to the study. It is replete with new and popular melodies of every character.

More than one hundred melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an interesting collection of well-chosen pieces for the clarinet.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE CORNET.

No book could be more complete as an instructor than this method for the cornet. In the first place the scale is fully illustrated, so that no one can possibly go astray; the manner of tuning and playing with other instruments is carefully laid down in the plainest of terms, so that the learner can arrange his o n music without the aid of a teacher. Particular attention is given to double and triple tonguing, with examples and exercises to accomplish the same. It also contains duets for two cornets, and duets for the cornet and piano, besides a great amount of information necessary to advance and instruct the learner.

More than one hundred melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an inter sting collection of well-chosen pieces for the cornet.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHND FOR THE FIFE.

This method for the fife is compiled and enlarged upon from the latest and best acknowledged authorities. The music is just such as is best suited to the requirements of a fife and drum corps. The melodies are written in the easiest and most available manner, so that ordinary performers can readily learn them with but little practice. The directions for acquiring a good articulation, with double tonguing, tremolo and embellishments, are clearly made by exercises pertaining to these accomplishments.

More than one hundred melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an intere ting collection of well-chosen pieces for the fife.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE FLAGEOLET.

This method for the flageolet is certainly one that must be appreciated by those desiring to perform upon this most excellent instrument. The natural scale is first given, and in each subsequent scale the sharps and flats that are introduced are illustrated in the plainest manner by a cut of the instrument, showing the open and closed notes and the keys required for the making of them. The directions for acquiring a good articulatlon, with double tonguing, tremolo and embellishments, are clearly made by exercises pertaining to these accomplishments.

More than one hundred melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an interesting collection of well-chosen pieces for the flageolet.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE FLUTE.

This method for the flute is certainly one that must be appreciated by those desiring to perform upon this most excellent instrument. The natural scale is first given, and in each subsequent scale the sharps and flats that are introduced are illustrated in the plainest manner by a cut of the instrument, showing the open and closed notes and the keys required for the making of them. The directions for acquiring a good articulation, with double tonguing, tremolo and embellishments, are clearly made by exercises pertaining to these accomplishments.

More than one hundred melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an interesting collection of well-chosen pieces for the flute.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE GUITAR.

For guitar this is surely the plainest method ever offered to the public. Like the banjo book, all the scales and chords are illustrated in every key by a plan of the fingerboard, designating the true positions of the fingers n all available positions. It contains the latest and most popular songs of the day, arranged in an easy and playable manner, also guitar duets, duets for the violin and guitar, and an endless variety of fandangos, guitar solos and characteristic compositions, making the most attractive and interesting collection of guitar compositions ever offered to those who try to learn.

More than sixty melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an interesting selection of well-chosen pieces for the guitar.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE MANDOLIN.

The "Eureka Method for the Mandolin" contains the rudiments of music in full, a dictionary of musical terms, full and explicit directions for transposing and everything pertaining to the study of the instrument. The scales in all the principal keys are illustrated with a diagram of the fingerboard, showing the flats and sharps in all their correct places. The positions or shifts are clearly defined, with the fingering indicated in a careful and studied manner, giving examples of all characteristic features in the style of professional playing.

A fine collection of most of the popular and standard melodies of the day and many classic themes are given for practice and pastime, comprising all that is needful to advance the learner in the correct and universal style of performance.

More than one hundred melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an interesting collection of well-chosen pieces for the mandolin.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE ORGAN.

Much care has been taken to make this book acceptable to the teacher as well as the learner. It has a description of the various stops, and the manner of using them to the best advantage is correctly explained. Altogether, it is the most desirable book of all for beginners.

Fifty-one choice melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an interesting collection of well-chosen pieces for the organ. Send for descriptive circulars and list of contents.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE PIANO.

This book is gotten up in a manner quite distinct from all other methods. The illustrated scales in all the principal keys are a notable feature, never having been given in any other work extant; they are something entirely new and the youngest child can comprehend at once the correct fingering, even before the notation has been acquired. It contains the scales and chords in all the various keys, and has a nice selection of songs for those who wish to sing, with most of the popular melodies arranged as lessons, in incidental keys, to interest and at the same time advance the pupil, along with many progressive exercises that are indispensable in the study.

Fifty-one choice melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an interesting collection of well-chosen pieces for the piano.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE PICCOLO.

This method for the piccolo is certainly one that must be appreciated by those desiring to perform upon this most excellent instrument. The natural scale is first given, and in each subsequent scale the sharps and flats that are introduced are illustrated in the plainest manner by a cut showing the open and closed notes and the keys required for the making of them. The directions for acquiring a good articulation, with double tonguing, tremolo and embellishments, are clearly made by exercises pertaining to these accomplishments.

More than one hundred melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an interesting collection of well-chosen pieces for the piccolo.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE VIOLA.

The series of instruction books recently compiled and edited by Sep. Winner seems to contain just what the learner and the amateur performer on the instruments represented stands most in need of.

This new one of the "Eureka" series- an instruction book for the viola—contains the rudiments of music, primary instructio s, exercises and full descriptions necessary to a perfect mastery of the instrument. Many choice and popular melodies are also given, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an interesting collection of well-chosen pieces for the viola.

WINNER'S EUREKA ME' HOD FOR THE VIOLIN.

The "Eureka Method for the Violin" contains the rudiments of music in full, a dictionary of musical terms, full and explicit directions for transposing and everything pertaining to the study of the instrument. The scales in all the principal keys are illustrated with a diagram of the fingerboard, showing the flats and sharps in all their correct places. The positions or shifts are clearly defined, with the fingering indicated in a careful and studied manner, giving examples of all characteristic features in the style of professional playing.

More than one hundred melodies are in this book, so that, besides its value as an instruction book, it is worth many dollars as an interesting collection of well-chosen pieces for the violin.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE VIOLONCELLO.

This is the latest volume in Mr. Winner's admirable series of self-instruction books. It contains all the features which have made the earlier volumes so widely popular. Every point necessary to the pupil's thorough mastery of the 'cello is clearly and carefully covered—the rudiments of music, transposition, fingering, tuning, pictorial illustrations of holding the instrument and bow, exercises, etc.

The book contains also an excellent collection of music from the best sources. Send for descriptive circulars.

WINNER'S EUREKA METHOD FOR THE ZITHER.

The latest volume of Mr. Winner's remarkable series of self-instruction books fully sustains the high order of excellence which has marked the series from its beginning.

The method of instruction is exactly suited to the needs of the beginner. The text is fully illustrated, the style simple and direct, and every point is carefully covered. Beginning with the first rudiments of music, the pupil is led, step by step, by means of explanations, illustrations and progressive exercises, to a well-grounded mastery of the instrument.

There is, besides, a large, well-chosen collection of music from the best sources, especially adapted to the growing needs of the pupil.

Any one of the above books sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of 60 cents, or any four for $2.00. The regular price of these books is 75 cents each, but we sell them for 60 cents. Send your orders to
